A WORKSPACE FOR EVERY WORK STYLE

We know that no two employees are the same. Some prefer to work alone at a desk, while others congregate in cafés and common areas. That's why it's important to understand the art of zoning and how it applies to individual work styles, comfort and productivity.

PRIVACY PLEASE

Personal desks, workstations and private huddle rooms are ideal options for employees who prefer to be left alone to complete an important task or concentrate on their work away from others.

OPEN-DOOR POLICY

Shared worktables and open meeting rooms are great places for employees who want to concentrate and work away from their desks alone or in the company of other co-workers.

COLLABORATION STATION

Comfortable common areas, touchdown tables and cafés provide employees with flexible furniture and spaces to meet, brainstorm and collaborate away from co-workers seeking a little more privacy.

A LAYOUT THAT ENHANCES EVERYDAY EXPERIENCES

When, where and how employees prefer to work have changed. People no longer sit at their desks for eight hours a day—instead, they move to various workspaces around the office depending on the projects they're working on and the places they want and need to be throughout the workday.
